Question 1--Why do young people go to Church? The reasons why young people go to Church are as many as there are young people. Some of the common reasons are:

1. Because they are compelled by parental authority to go.
2. " " wish to see their friends and enjoy the social life of the church.
3. Because they feel it the right and proper thing to do.
4. " " need the spiritual strength and peace which true worship gives.

Question 2-- Why do you go to Church?

I am not sure why I go to church. I know that I feel the need of going. It here I do not go it seems as if there was something lacking in my life. To worship with other believers gives me strength to go on and do the work before me. It gives me rest and repletion and acts as a stimulus to all that is good and true in me.

Question 3-- Do you know any young people who do not go to Church?

I know of too many young people who do not go to church.

Question 4-- Why do such young people not go to Church?

Because they see in it only a tiresome ceremony. They have not yet felt the touch of God's spirit, nor experienced any union of their soul with the Infinite. They are content to go on in an easy frame of mind, which does not challenge them to think of other than material things, or else they fear that going to church will make them lose their material joys and pleasures.

Question 5-- How does the service as a whole appeal to you?

The service appeals to me only as a means to worship. It is not worship in itself. It gives me joy because it affords the opportunity of joining with other souls in reverencing a supreme Deity.

Question 6--- What criticisms or suggestions can you make that would seem to you to make the service more appealing to young people? I do not think any service no matter how attractive nor how appealing could long hold young people. The desire to worship can not be installed by ceremony, or else we would all belong to the Catholic Church. The impulse must come from the heart, and be born of an experience of the soul with God.
