

Petersham, Mass.

December 21. 1947

Dear friends Davises:

You are, I hope, well aware that our feelings towards both of you, as well as our most prodigal wishes for the Davises, don't need any conventional date to become evident. We are always conscious of them. Nevertheless, we are glad to take the opportunity of the Christmas Week and of the Coming New Year to tell what a deep need we feel - "a need of the heart" as the French say - to express you in a particular way our most affectionate wishes. I could thus continue, but I prefer to stop lest I become sentimental. You know us and we know both of

With much pleasure

You - this knowledge should be more eloquent than any thing else I would try to tell you with the pen, and in your friendship, which is young and yet so natural and solid, for many, many years to come.

Merry Christmas and happy New Year!

Your friends
